HIGHLANDERS RECEIVE TWO MORE HARD JOLTS

Sox one run ahead, but the Highlanders stood at Armagedden and fell en Collins for two in the fifth. Singles by Maleney, Chase and Cree and a sacrifice fly were the wherefore of the phenomenon of the home team taking the lead.

With the sixth, goed night. A walk to L. Gardner, a double by Stahl, a triple by Wagner and an infield out fetched three Bostons to the haven. To forestall any additional New York rally the Red Sox laid up a store of five more runs. They were cheap runs, five hits being eased in with four bases on balls, a missed grounder by Maloney, a fumble by Martin and a passed ball.

The Highlanders had men en bases in every inning but the ninth, but except in the first and fifth the thoumbents of the sacks were as tightly bound to them as Prometheus to the rock.

Seven Runs in Sixth Inning Bent on the field of the Piping Rock Club. It is reported the craze has become so intense that the sounds of galloping horses and the crack of mallets have been heard even in the moonlight. Again the Whites and Yellows lined up to-day in competition and the Yellows easily took the match from the former team by reason of superior goal getting qualities.

Both O'Day and Curling wanted to play on the Whites, so they divided up by each playing four periods at No. 1. The only penalty lost for the latter team was a safety by Bradley Martin, Jr. They gathered four goals. The Yellows made eight. The game was watched by a large crowd of North Shore society folks. Courtney sent his varsity over the full four miles sent his varsity over the full four miles as hard as he has sent any Cornell crew in recent years and when the big eight from Ithaca paddled up to the float at The Oaks Courtney said he was satisfied. The Cornell freshmen picked up the varsity at the two mile mark and for the first half mile held a two length lead on the senior eight. Then the varsity began to crawl up, using a powerful 34 stroke that put them on even terms with the youngsters at the bridge. They beat the freshmen to the finish as they pleased, crossing the line three lengths to the good.

Pennsylvania trailed Syracuse over the course and rowed in better form than at any previous time within the week. The Syracuse crew too rowed in wonderfully improved style and slashed down the river at thirty-six strokes to the minute all the way, finishing with a driving sprint, Every day the Syracuse eight has been Every day the Syracuse eight has been going better and now it is conceded to have more than an outside chance of stepping in and upsetting the calculations of both Cornell and Columbia, between whom the big race is expected to the The Quakers are travelling better than a week ago, and, although they have not improved as much as the freshmen, still they are picking up speed from day to day.

Stanford took advantage of the splendid water conditions for a spin over the course, but at the bridge the Californians decided they had done enough hard work for one morning and put in to their boathouse. They got out again early in the afternoon, however, and had a long paddle. Clover got another chance at No. 4 to-day when Watkins was taken out for the afternoon row.

Watkins was taken out for the afternoon row.

Jim Rice kept the Columbia crews on the upper course and spent most of his time in Ironing out the faults in the freshman eight and the four. With McCarthy back at stroke in the four oared boat there was a big improvement in its rowing. The Wisconsin varsity and freshman crews had a spirited tussle this afternoon, the freshmen beating the varsity by a length in two and a half miles. The Badger crews, however, were badly used up at the finish and were rowing at sixes and sevens in both boats.

To-morrow will be a day of rest and quiet, for it is against the custom of the Hudson crews to row on Sunday. The oarsmen will not be permitted to spend the day altogether in idleness, for a long tramp will be substituted for the afternoon row in most of the camps.
